Nuuanu Dam Is Safe But Specifications Weak

Engineer Schuyler Passes Some Criticism But On Whole is Favorable— Recommendations

Engineer Schuyler's complete report was made public this morning and copies distributed. It opens with a review of the reasons for Mr. Schuyler coming here, the facts on which he was requested to report and the elaborateness of his investigation. Schuyler says that every assistance has been rendered him by those in authority.

The committee requested from Mr. Schuyler opinions on the following:

1. Are the plans and specifications, as drawn by S. G. Walker and approved by Mr. Holloway and Mr. Howland, of the Public Works Department, for a reservoir in Nuuanu valley, complete in every detail?

2. Are the alterations suggested by Mr. Kellogg being carried out?

3. Is the work of the Nuuanu dam in its present state of construction proper and safe?

4. If the dam is completed under the present plans and specifications, will it be safe?

5. Your opinion of the efficiency of the dam when completed.

The plans and specifications come in for a small share of criticism by the expert, but qualifies it with the statement that "hindsight is better than foresight." He refers to one particular piece of work, the stave pipe, as something to be avoided by unskilled hands and attempted by skilled workmen only when it cannot be avoided. Schuyler says: "I DO NOT KNOW OF ITS HAVING BEEN USED IN THIS MANNER BEFORE, AT LEAST FOR A DAM OF ANY MAGNITUDE." He says the specifications should have been more explicit.

"The only point I make in calling attention to this particular feature, which may seem of small importance, is that the use of wood stave pipe, armored with reinforced concrete, being a novel type of construction as a reservoir outlet with which contractors could not be expected to be familiar, the specifications should have been very explicit and minute in describing the precise methods for doing the work in an acceptable and unmistakable manner. The result of neglecting this minute of detail apparently led to a class of work which in time led to controversy with the contractor, criticism by the inspector and a general lack of confidence in the stability of the construction. I may say here that the reconstruction of the pipes as recommended by Mr. Kellogg and the increased thickness of concrete covering applied has remedied all their defects and produced outlet pipes which are simply strong, substantial and safe. The concrete alone is sufficient without reliance upon the wood, while the complete saturation of the latter with the exclusion of air, will protect it from decay indefinitely.

"Under sub-head 'C' of 'Embankment' it is evident that the use of wheel-scraper or slip-scraper was not considered as admissible, doubtless for the reason that in a preceding paragraph it was provided that 'no borrow pits shall be opened within the limits of the reservoir,' and this stipulation increased the length of haul required to obtain the material for the dam beyond the practicable limits of scrapers. In my opinion this was an unfortunate stipulation, as it evidently resulted in much higher bids than might have been secured had the contractors been at liberty to scrape earth from the adjacent areas of broad flat bench lands immediately above the dam, on either side of the stream. This doubtless was prompted by a desire to avoid possible leakage from the reservoir, as the top soil is much more impervious than the deeper layers through which water is percolating down the valley. Nice Things Said About Candidates

The Bulletin is constantly receiving letters from the people in favor of the various candidates for the Pacific States Tour. Following is one from a Hamakua enthusiast:

Manager Bulletin Pacific States Contest:—We hope that it is the wish and desire of all those interested in the above contest, to support only those young ladies who will represent the Islands with distinction and credit, not only to themselves and to those that were instrumental in helping them in securing the coveted prize, but to the community at large.

MISS HATTIE L. SAFFREY
Honokaa's Favorite

Hattie Luukia Saffrey, the Honokaa favorite, was born at Lahaina, Maui, a little over 22 years ago. She descended on her father's side from Captain Edmund Saffrey, a sturdy British mariner who settled at Ulukoua, Maui, and whose descendants today number several hundreds, prominent among them being the present Sheriff of the County of Maui. On the mother's side she belongs to the Makekaha of Lahaina, also a numerous and increasing family, a prominent member being the Senator from Hawaii.

Educated at the Maunaloa, Kohala and Kamehameha Schools, she graduated with high credit from the Normal School in 1905, and was appointed Principal of the Kaunahu School, Hamakua, Hawaii, which position she still holds. Tall and graceful, accomplished and amiable, of a bright and sunny disposition, with a talent for music and song, it is the opinion of her friends that she possesses all of the qualities that would make her a true representative of the Hawaiian people on the Pacific Coast. "Every little bit helps."

FOR MABEL CHING KAU
Editor Evening Bulletin:—It is just and right that different nationalities be represented in this contest. Thus I take pleasure in endorsing the name of Mabel Ching Kau, a Hawaiian-born Chinese young lady, a teacher in the public schools, noted for her intelligence, affability, musical talents, and as being thoroughly Americanized. She is a leader among the educated Chinese, a member of their literary societies, and an exception to the reticent Chinese girl, possessing rare social gifts and an amiable disposition. She has command of the English language and will represent her race abroad with the same grace with which she adorns society at home. Aside from the accomplishments she has acquired by her studious application to books, nature has endowed her with attractiveness of form and feature. Thus it is the wish of her many friends and admirers that she be one of the six charming girls chosen to represent Hawaii nei. SARAH R. KAY.

McCarthy's Resolve Asks Congress To Justify Governments

Senator McCarthy today introduced the following resolution in the Senate: Whereas, the Congress of the United States in the Act approved April 30, 1900, creating the Territory of Hawaii, and providing a Government therefor, made it clear by provisions therein, that it was the reasonable expectation of the Congress that the principles of local self-government would in time be developed within the Territory, conformable to the spirit and methods of American institutions, and expressly provided that counties, cities and towns might be created, but Whereas, it has been found, in the effort to carry out this reasonable expectation of the Congress, that the immediate necessity it was under at the time to provide a complete form and system of government adequate to meet the peculiarities of the situation, has resulted in serious difficulties in the way of adjusting the government of the Territory to local self-government, even along lines of the most conservative development, and the most usual forms of local self-government such as counties and cities, resulting unavoidably, in burdensome and obstructive overlappings and duplications of governmental functions.

Therefore, Be It Resolved by the Senate of the Territory of Hawaii, the House of Representatives concurring, that the Congress is respectfully urged, either upon the recommendations of a Commission appointed to investigate and report on the subject, or upon such other information and advice as it shall choose to act upon, to so amend the said Act creating the Territory, that there may be appropriate and adequate separation and distribution of the functions of government between the Territorial Government and Local Governmental Bodies and jurisdictions, to the end that duplication and overlapping of functions may be avoided; that Territorial officers whose functions and duties have been or may be transferred to local offices may be abolished; that all of given classes of duties may be transferred from Territorial or Local jurisdiction, and generally, that there may be better adjustment of local and Territorial functions, duties and responsibilities than is now possible, so that the obstacle of increased cost of government will not constantly be in the way of the development of the principle of local self-government in this Territory.

FINAL REPORT ON FLORAL PARADE

Committee Has Balance
For Next Year
Program

Chairman Dillingham of the Floral Parade Committee called a meeting of the committee this afternoon to hear final report. The principal report was the financial statement of Treasurer Trent, which was accepted. The vouchers and all matters were turned over to the Promotion Committee for safe keeping. As the balance amounted to about $150, it was voted to hold this amount and turn it over to the next committee as the refund to each contributor would be very small.

The report of the Treasurer follows: STATEMENT OF FLORAL PARADE RECEIPTS AND EXPENSES, FEBRUARY 22, 1907.

The Value Of Confidence

In no line of business is the buyer's confidence of more importance than in the selling of clothing. The dealer who attempts to convince the buyer that his goods are the best, and that his place is the place where the best could be obtained, must see that the facts conform to his statements, and that his goods are in every way up to the standard. He had better never try to sell to a man than to mislead him or to exaggerate; for the customer will quickly discover such practice of misrepresenting merchandise. There is never danger of a protest and always a certainty of full value received when a coat or suit is recognized as
